

Differences Between the Northern and Southern States

- The northern states (industrialized/factory communities) wanted any new state created from the western territories to become a "free state," while the southern states (agricultural/farming communities) wanted any new state in the western territories to become a "slave state."
- The economy in the northern United States was more industrialized using machines, while in the southern region, it was agricultural and relied more on slave labor.